Wisconsin State Pistol Championship

August 25-26, 2018

Story by: Jeff Nass

Since 1982, Jon Nortemann has been Match Director of the NRA Wisconsin Outdoor Pistol Championship at the Beloit Rifle Club. This year, it was held August 25-26. Jon and his crew do a great job running the match and, as always, this year was no exception. It was a little warm and muggy on Sunday, but we had no rain. Competitors fire 270 rounds, 90 - 22 LR, 90 - Centerfire (mainly 32 S&W, 38 Special, and 45 ACP), and 90 - 45 ACP. At the end of both days shooters could also fire up to three 30 round CMP matches. Sadly, the number of shooters was down this year from a possible 80 shooters to 51.

Congratulations to the winners and all who competed.

Wisconsin Outdoor Open Pistol State Champion:

Scott Soik - 2508-72

Match Winner: Paul Porter - 2614-93

High WI Master: Mike Reil - 2504-70

High Master: Ralph Reid - 2553-82

High WI Expert: Scott Soik - 2508-72

High WI Sharpshooter: David Grace - 2422-53

High Sharpshooter: Walter Klinger - 2462-47

High WI Marksman: Paul Wolf - 2302-39

Bullseye (Precision Pistol) shooting is a great way to improve your overall shooting skills. High Power, Action Pistol, CCW Holders or for those that want to be a better shot, Bullseye Pistol will help. It is also a great way for clubs to informally teach safe gun handling to new and old members. It can be shot as a group on a weekly or monthly basis, or on your own on the honor system. Matches can be customized to meet your member's needs such as weak hand only, two handed, CCW firearms only (micro, mini, etc.), 22 RF, etc.

The Old RTV Trick

Story by: Jim Schonke

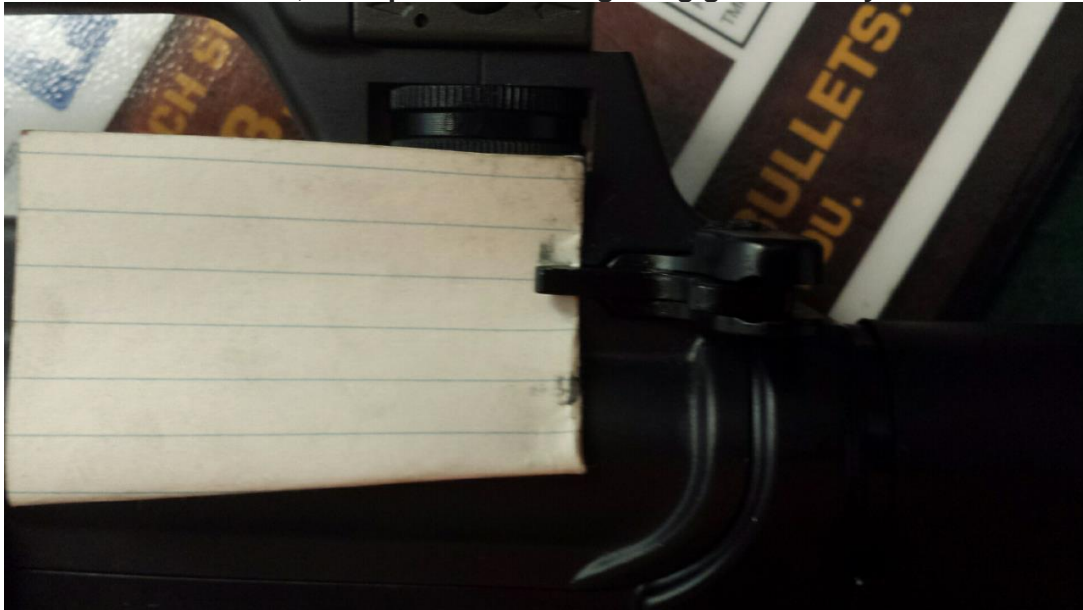

As accurate and competitive as the AR type rifles are, they have one little annoying flaw that can affect your ability to shoot accurately in rapid fire. What sometimes happens is a little bit of propellant gas leaks through the back of the receiver and obscures your vision where you have to blink a few times for it to clear up before firing again which wastes valuable time during a rapid-fire string.

Fortunately, there is an easy fix for this, I was taught this simple trick when I first started competing and thought everyone knew this. However last summer at Camp Perry some of our juniors were having problems and I didn't have the supplies with me, fortunately the Marine Corps Shooting Team Armorers were more than happy to help them out.

All you need to do this yourself is some degreaser such as gun scrubber or brake parts cleaner, oil or grease, cardstock such as a 3 x 5 recipe card, and some silicone RTV sealant.

Fieldstrip your upper receiver and apply a thin film of grease or a heavy coat of oil where the top rear of the charging handle contacts it. This acts as a release agent, so you don't glue the charging handle to the receiver. Degrease the top rear of the charging handle and apply a small bead of RTV sealant (the color doesn't matter, I just prefer black) in the inside corner at the top rear of the handle which will fill the gap between the rear of the receiver and the grasping handles. Assemble the handle to the receiver but stop just short of securing the latch, instead fold the 3 x 5 card in half and place it in between the handle latch and the recess in the receiver that it catches on. The card should hold the handle just a little bit out from the seated position while the RTV cures so that when in use the RTV will be compressed just a little bit providing a better seal. After the RTV is cured excess sealant can be trimmed off with a sharp knife.

That's it, a simple solution to getting gas in the eye!

Marksmanship History: The Dick Act

by NRA Staff - Thursday, April 5, 2018

There was a significant development in marksmanship in 1903 with the Congressional passage on January 21 of “An Act to increase the efficiency of the militia and promote rifle practice,” commonly referred to as the Dick Act (32 State. 775), so named after Congressman Charles Dick of Ohio, who introduced the legislation into the House. The bill secured federal status for the militia and was prepared by the National Guard Association, where Dick served as president from 1902-1909.

Specifically, the bill provided federal funding of one million dollars annually to state militias upon their meeting certain rifle instruction and target practice criteria. Section 14 of the Act stipulated that state teams visiting the national competition (National Matches) would receive pay, subsistence, and transportation. It was the first significant legislative act that provided appropriations for the organized militia comparable to what the regular service received. The Dick Act in essence established the National Guard units and state militias as the reserve of the Army and fueled the need for adequate training facilities, which prompted the eventual acquisition of Camp Perry in Dick’s home state.

The Dick Act also authorized the creation of the Militia Division, predecessor to the National Guard Bureau, in the Adjutant General’s Office (AGO), which replaced the system where militia affairs were handled by various departments of the War Department on an as needed basis. The Militia Division became the Division of Militia Affairs (1908) and the Militia Bureau (1916) before it assumed the designation of National Guard Bureau in 1942.
